KSW CONSTRUCTION CORPORATION NAMED UP AND COMING FIRM
Wisconsin Builder Magazine recognizes KSW at Newsmaker of the Year awards banquet

MADISON, Wis. (October 27, 2008) – KSW Construction Corporation was recently named Up and Coming Firm of the Year by Wisconsin Builder Magazine. KSW accepted the award at the Newsmaker of the Year banquet held at Country Springs Hotel in Waukesha, Wis., on October 27, 2008. “Being nominated for this award by our peers makes it an especially proud accomplishment,” said Dean Slaby, president of KSW Construction Corporation. Dean was joined in attendance at the banquet by Doug Slaby, vice-president.

KSW was recognized in particular for its presence in the commercial construction industry after only three years of business. The company’s reputation for fairness and solid client relationships also stood out in the news article which was featured in the Wisconsin Builder Magazine this month. Joe McFarland, a KSW client and developer with the Trowbridge Group of Madison said “Sometimes you get contractors that think the tenant is a problem for asking for this or that. <KSW> is always willing to get it done the way the tenant wants to make the project work. I really like that.” KSW took on a challenging project for McFarland in 2007 which included converting an existing movie theater into a leveled out tenant space.

Wisconsin Builder’s annual Newsmaker award winners were chosen this year by nomination process, according to Wisconsin Builder Magazine’s November 2008 issue. The magazine considered 67 submissions from across the state, and then chose 17 companies worthy of the Newsmaker award. The firms awarded were recognized for projects which they had completed, the way the firms completed the projects and how surrounding areas were affected by the company’s work. Other categories recognized included architect of the year, green innovator of the year and developer of the year.
